QAC. AmeriCorps is a way some people choose to make a difference. AmeriCorps is a service program supported by the federal government. The program brings people of all ages and backgrounds together, provides them opportunities to serve their community for a sustained period of time, addressing challenges in education, housing and food security, conservation, disaster response, public health and more. During their year of service, AmeriCorps members earn a living stipend and a scholarship they can use to pay for college or to pay back student loans. They also develop new skills that they can take with them wherever they go next. Community-based organizations like City Year, Teach For America, Habitat for Humanity, and United Way receive federal grants to recruit, train and supervise the AmeriCorps members during their year of service.

How strongly would you consider participating in an AmeriCorps service program either now or in the future?

QCC. There is a newly proposed national service program focused on the climate crisis called the Civilian Climate Corps, which could expand AmeriCorps' ability to focus on conservation efforts and fighting climate change.

Climate Corps members could work on clean energy projects, mitigate wildfire damage, rehabilitate habitats, expand access to the outdoors, and improve the energy efficiency of our communities. In addition, members could also learn skills that would be directly translated into the green energy jobs of the future.

How strongly would you consider participating in a Climate Corps service program either now or in the future?

QBILL2. AmeriCorps members who serve full-time earn a modest stipend, but many members have to rely on a second job, savings or support from family to actually cover their living expenses during their year of service. The funding in the relief bill will increase the stipend to help cover a member's basic expenses during their service term. The goal is to make service an affordable option for more young adults and encourage more people from diverse backgrounds to apply. Do you think increasing the stipend to cover living expenses is a good idea or a bad idea?
